Lars Oldekamp:

My shoulder injury from Rhenen has been bugging me much longer than I had expected. According to my doctors the split has healed fine, but it's still really sore.

Anyway I wanted to ride my home GP and still felt quite confident after Saturday's qualification race. I had a decent start and was racing in 20th position when my bike jumped out of gear and I fell. I restarted in 34th and worked my way back up to 27th.

My first heat was almost a copy of my qualifier, I was 17th after almost 2 laps and slid out. I restarted in about 30th place but then my shoulder started hurting quite badly and I couldn't really push any more. After the race I decided not to start the second heat anymore, as my shoulder wouldn't allow me to show my real potential.

Now I'm going to take it easy until the next race of the ADAC series in Prisannewitz, where I need to be in tip top shape again.
